

World History Week 5

Summer/Lifelong enrichment tasks:

1. Watch and read news articles at least once a week.
(since you are becoming adults it is important to know what is going on in the world)

2. Ask an adult family member if they know about a specific history topic, and then Teach a family member what you have learned.

(the topic can be from the current assignments about history this year; it always feels good to share knowledge)

3. Ask an adult family member about their own family history with questions like:

Who was the first in our family to immigrate to the U.S.? (And When?)

What types of jobs or work did they do?

What cities or states have our family members lived in?

Ask these questions for both sides of the family (When you get older and those people pass away you will wish you had asked these questions...guaranteed, I know I do)
